

Oh no! Our Friendship is in Danger!

Here is your survival kit that you can use
in case your friendship is in danger.

What to do in case your friendship is in danger?

Long-distance friendship can be hard because nothing will ever be the same again. However, this survival kit is loaded with things that can help you save that friendship.

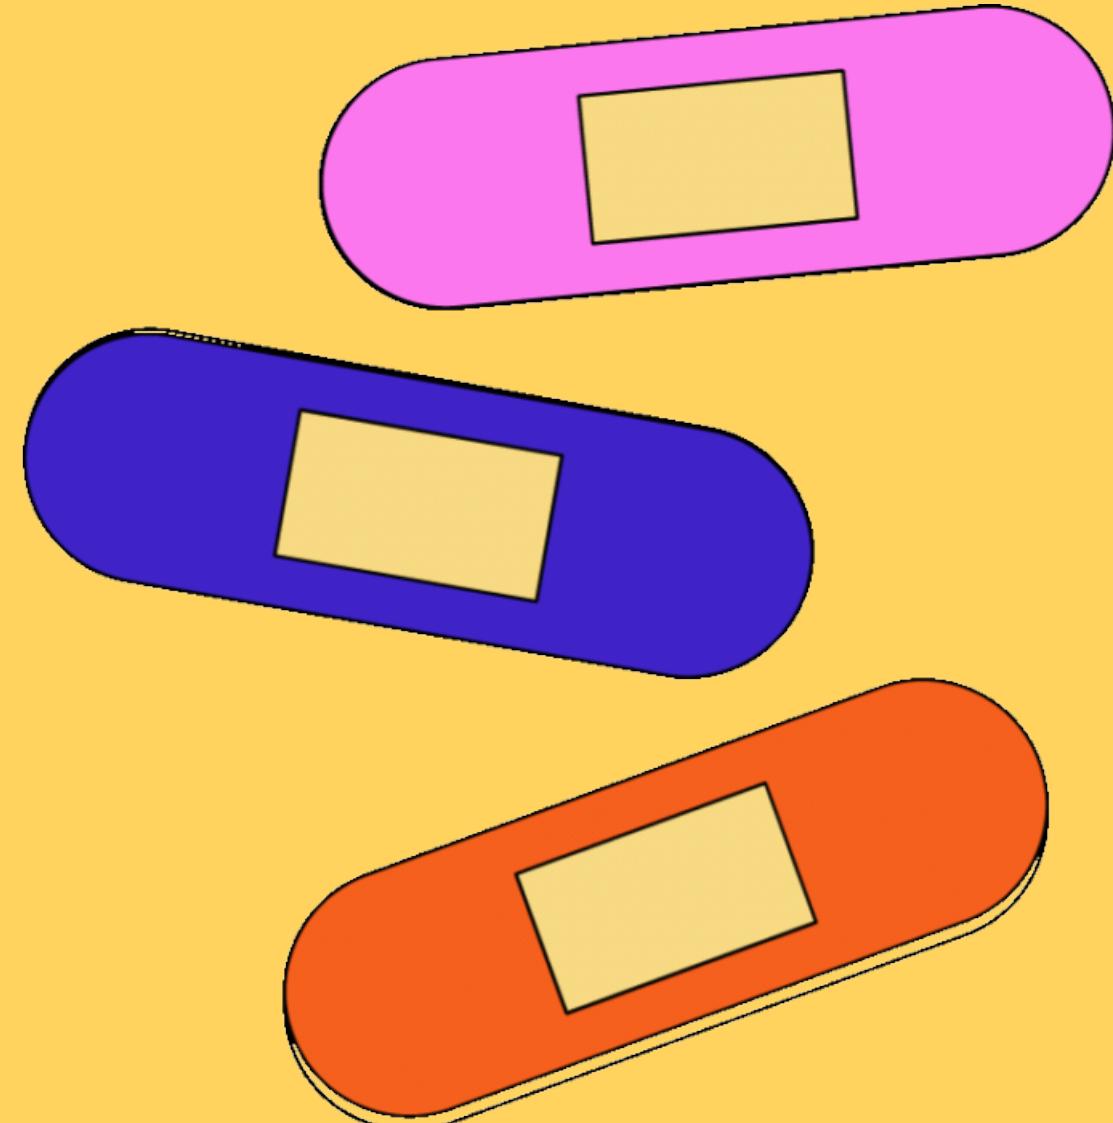

TAKE A PILL!

Taking a pill from your Put in the Time When You Can Vitamins will guarantee that both of you can save that friendship when you put in the time and effort to meet and bond once in a while.

Put some bandainds on!

Putting on your Accept The Situation Bandaid can help you accept that your friend has moved away for any reason and being away from each other can make you feel sad or lost. Your friend may have no choice but to move but assuring them and accepting the situation can help both of you save that special friendship.

Don't forget your Communication is Important lotion!

For sure your communication will change after the two of you have separate ways but there can be plenty of ways to still be able to communicate with each other. It can be talking to each other online every day or you can send letters to each other.

Take a compass with you!

You can use the distance as an opportunity. When the two of you live far away from each other, you can plan a mini getaway or go on a road trip together to bond with each other.

The End!

I understand that being away from a friend can be hard to deal but I hope this survival kit can help you save that very special friendship.

